The effect of phorbol esters on the ability of mouse peritoneal cells to produce collagen was investigated in vitro. On the basis of the clinical syndrome, phorbol diesters are considered to be capable of inducing dermatitis and psoriasis. Phorbol 12-myristate 13-acetate (PMA) is known to be capable of modulating the immune response of macrophages to foreign antigens. After extraction by collagenase, we investigated the effect of phorbol ester (0.1-100 micrograms/ml) on the kinetics of collagen synthesis by isolated mouse peritoneal cells. We also checked the toxicity of the ester on the peritoneal cells. PMA enhanced the rate of collagen production. This enhancement was evident at concentrations of 10 micrograms/ml and above. The results indicate that peritoneal cells synthesise collagen when cultured in the presence of high concentrations of PMA.Tag: Brave browser A lot of people have been wondering about adding a crypto-currency wallet to the Brave browser, but Brave support for using Bitcoin as its native currency is very basic.
